Reading Passage Summary

was History class and Miss Townsend had arranged a special treat. She fiddled with the knobs and dials of the big expensive machine and turned to the class. "Class, today we will be talking with Mary Lee who is coming to us from the late 1800s. Please keep your questions related to her life, do not mention her death, and class - no mobile phones!" Miss Townsend turned the dial and the time machine whirred into life. A da of white light appeared and a short, plump woman stepped from the light. She looked at the class with stern eyes and said, "Good afternoon class. How may I help you?" Brooke's hand shot up. "You're from Adelaide, but you have an Irish accent. Why is Mary smiled and said, "I was born in Ireland in 1821 and didn't come out to the colony artil 1879. The Irish blood runs thick in my veins, but my heart belongs to the colony." Jayden frowned and asked, "So why did you come out?" "I'm the ma to seven bonny children, and my dear lad John Benjamin took ill here. I ad to come over to nurse the lad. Sadly, he passed away."

Jayden nodded sadly, Mary smiled and soid, "But our Lord works in mysterious ways, young lad. By coming across the sea to these shores I found my true calling. Back home in Ireland I was a wife and mother. Here I have become political activist, social reformer and advocate to end women's suffrage."
"Can you explain women's suffrage ma'm?" asked Ella politely.

Mary smiled and nodded. "Here in the colory, women are thought to be little more than broad mares. Wives. Mothers. Makers of dinner and keepers of houses. We're to be seen and not heard. I and other like-minded folk - folk like the Social Purity ociety - believe this is wrong. Women have much and more to contribute to society beyond keeping their menfolk happy."

Mary shook her head. "No child. Honourable, for-seeing men have champi cause; men like the Reverend J. C. Kirby and Edward Stirling. With laudable menfolk such as these behind our cause, we created the South Australian Women's Suffrage © Aussie Star Resources 2018
